Tasting Notes

The 2015 vintage yielded a much smaller crop than usual, so unfortunately there is much less wine, but, it is of such high quality that is typical of a low yield year. The Santa Lucia Highland spice is noticable along with the immense depth of black cherry and red cherry fruit. The palate has a weight to it that adds to the structural balance of this wine and keeps it going all the way to the finish. There is a near perfect acid balance that helps the weightier palate maintain its Pinot elegance.
